Judicial experience in the High Court Chancery Division

On invitation of the senior judiciary of England and Wales through the Judicial Office at the time, Arfan Khan has undertaken work experience with a judge in the High Court Chancery Division through judicial work shadowing, sometime informally known as "sitting in". He sat with the judge in a complex tax matter arising from the Royal Mail Group Litigation, and in the urgent business and interim applications list dealing with interlocutory injunctions. This took place outside the formal judicial mentoring schemes that now operate.

Practice

Arfan Khan has a high-profile specialist appellate practice in chancery, commercial, and public law. He is instructed in exceptionally difficult appeals. He has led and argued landmark appeals in the Court of Appeal, the High Court, and the UK Supreme Court. He appeared successfully as sole Counsel in Day v Haine [2008] BCC 84, a landmark appeal where the Court of Appeal reversed the Court at first instance, holding that protective awards were provable debts in a company liquidation.

The Court of Appeal decision in Day v Haine paved the way for the UK Supreme Court decision in Re Nortel [2013] UKSC, where the correctness of his approach in Day v Haine was confirmed. He was instructed on appeal to the Court of Appeal in a widely reported case concerning the gifted drawings of the late Francis Bacon. Recently, when leading a tax barrister, and a tax litigator on appeal to the Court of Appeal, he persuaded the Upper Tribunal to grant permission to appeal against its own decision on a point of law.

He has also appeared in landmark public law cases. In Wokuri v Kassam [2013] Ch 80, he succeeded in contending that the diplomat was not entitled to immunity. He successfully led the intervention for 4A law in the Court of Appeal, and in the UKSC in Benkharbouche v Libya & Others [2018] IRLR 123, where the UK Supreme Court upheld the Court of Appeal's decision to set aside the State Immunity Act 1978, to give effect to certain claims falling within the material scope of EU law. He led in the Court of Appeal in Reyes v Al-Malki [2017] ICR 42 and made written submissions in the UKSC.

He has also appeared successfully as lead or sole Counsel in other high-profile cases raising free speech and national security issues, such as Geert Wilders v SSHD [2010] INLR 337 and Geller & Anor v SOS [2015] All ER (D) 54. In 2009, Arfan Khan was named Times Lawyer of the Week.

Whilst the core of his practice is appeals, where he is increasingly instructed to lead or appear as sole Counsel, he is frequently instructed as sole or lead Counsel in the High Court. These include trials, and interlocutory disputes, where the sums involved are substantial. He also conducts mediation of disputes both as a mediator and Counsel.

He appears in litigation against or for the government with appropriate security clearance. Arfan Khan's advisory work includes advising a government department in complex high-profile cases and providing written decisions resolving disputed issues of evidence by applying the relevant law at short notice. He has also advised an intervener independently in a high-profile appeal to the UKSC raising national security issues.

Before commencing a career at the Bar, he was a part-time tutor and examiner in Property Law at the University of Sheffield.
